

1. ELECTRONIC DISTRIBUTION

The Electrical Design Group's IT Conditions have been developed in order to minimise the costs incurred by our clients, and to ensure free access to all relevant information for all parties. To this end, EDG's policy is to have information provided on an 'as needed' basis, rather than the more traditional policy of provision to all parties 'just in case'.

To achieve the 'as needed' goal, EDG freely distributes electronic copies of relevant information to interested parties on the understanding the recipient agrees with the conditions contained herein. The advantages of an 'as needed' approach to information issue, utilising the free electronic distribution of relevant information, include:

- Providing continuous access to the current issue of the information as held by EDG.
- The recipients and users are able to avoid processing and storing information that would traditionally have to be issued multiple times by EDG 'just in case'.
- Electronic information can be transmitted and processed considerably more quickly than traditional hard copies of information.
- The cost of storing electronic information is considerably lower than that of storing traditional hard copies.
- Simple procedures can be implemented by recipients and users to more accurately file and retrieve electronic information than traditional hard copy information.
- Electronic information is not damaged through use, does not fade and is not subject to the ravages of time.

2. NATURE OF INFORMATION

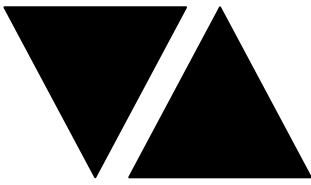

In addition to being used as a source of information, data and documents made available by EDG are commonly used in the preparation of further information, as well as to be used in construction and installation. For electronic information to be used in such a manner, it is normal practice for such information to be modified by the user. As such modifications are outside the control of EDG, the accuracy and integrity of electronic information outside of EDG's control cannot be established or guaranteed by EDG.

The issuing of electronic information allows third parties outside the control of EDG to modify and issue further electronic and hard copies of information that appear to have been issued directly by EDG. As such EDG can not establish or guarantee the accuracy and integrity of electronic and hard copies of information not issued directly by EDG.

EDG is able to confirm the accuracy and integrity of the electronic information available on the EDG website www.edg.net.au.

Should the accuracy and integrity of any EDG information, electronic or hard copy be critical, a copy must be obtained directly from EDG. Such copies can be downloaded directly from the EDG website www.edg.net.au or obtained by contacting EDG directly.
